

THE DODGE CITY TIMES.

DODGE CITY, SATURDAY, MARCH 27

LARNED.

From the Chronoscope.

The buffalo wallows "filling up" must have been an omen of some kind.

The Sorgo Sugar Company means business they had a very interesting meeting Wednesday last.

Settlers are pouring into Barbour county in goodly numbers. Several of our teamsters are now hauling goods and household plunder from this depot to the Medicine.

We learn that broom corn raised in this section sells for enough more in price at Chicago to pay all freights and expenses over the broom corn raised in States east of us. The straws are tougher and wear better.

Since the late snow, farmers feel more confident in having a good wheat crop. The melting of the snow has put new life into the wheat and the freezing leaves the soil in splendid condition for a spring crop.

LAS ANIMAS.

From the Leader.

Hay in loose form sells at $15 per ton; in bales at $1.25 per hundred.

Mr. Simmons, who has charge of the Divide cattle camp, informs us that no less than 10,000 head of cattle from Sandy and Rush creeks have struck the Arkansas between Fort Lyon and Old Fort Lyon. Immense bodies of cattle are also on Adobe.

The proper place to sink an artesian well is on the plains north of the Arkansas, between here and the line of the Kansas Pacific. There is an immense open country beyond the reach of irrigation and without running streams, yet well adapted to stock raising, provided the water supply can be assured.

West Las Animas is threatened with an exodus soon, which will materially thin her population. Among those who contemplate leaving are H. W. Jones, Phillip Lander, George W. Higgins, David Saunders, D. F. Allen, the family of J. E. Loring, Jas. Reid, Mr. Hopper, Mrs. J. B. Smith, Mrs. Van Horn and Mrs. Barnes.

DOURA, RICE OR EGYPTIAN CORN.

[Larned Chronoscope.]

I will give your readers my short experience with this crop; I have been growing this corn for three years, and have found, by careful watching and measuring of ground, that it will yield at least five bushels to one of our common corn. Dry as was last summer, my rice corn yielded forty bushels per acre, while my Indian corn did not yield three with the very same cultivation, and it weighs sixty pounds to the bushel. I have fattened my pork on this corn for three years and find that I can fatten it quicker, making firmer and sweeter meat than with Indian corn. I have grown rice corn both on old ground and sod, and it does well on either. I think the best yield can be secured by planting about three and one-half feet by one foot apart, and with a reasonable season, eighty bushels can be grown per acre. Commenced feeding my rice corn green, as you would other corn, to my horses and pigs, and was astonished at the result. I feed my milch cows a patent pail full night and morning, and find it much better than bran. I fed to my cows just as I gathered it from the field. One bushel will plant eighteen acres if used properly. It threshes readily in ordinary threshing machines and can be done at a cost of three cents per bushel. If any one wishes further information in regard to this crop, I will cheerfully give them all I can, if they will write to

JOHN SCOTT,
Larned, Pawnee County, Kansas.

EVERY established local newspaper receives subscription from the large cities, which puzzles the publisher to account for, but which the New York Times of a recent date throws some light on, in the following: "A wholesale grocer in this city who became rich in his business, says his rule always was when he sold a bill of goods on credit, to immediately subscribe for the local paper of his debtor. So long as his customers advertised liberally and vigorously he rested, but as soon as he began to contract his advertising space he took the fact as evidence there was trouble ahead and invariably went for his debtor." Said he, "the man who is too poor to make his business known is too poor to do business." The withdrawing of an advertisement is an evidence of a weakness that business men are not slow to act upon.

Communicated.

Is it not that purest Spirits
Dwell in temples weak and frail,
Which are sure to fall in ruin,
When they feel the winters gale.
Dost thou think it is the action
Of the roaring restless wind,
Which doth rend the ties asunder
That so tenderly are entwined.

I am reckless of thy answer,
But my wife was one of these
Who so early hastened hither,
Where the sainted dead repose.
Whose sweet memory lingers with us
Like a beam of purest light,
To suggest a thought of Heaven,
And of Angels clothed in white.

When her heart was beating highest,
Though her cheek displayed no bloom;
At the summons of a stranger
She forsook her earthly home;
Yea, with all the fond devotion,
Which can fill a trusting heart,
She embraced the one that loved her
And was ready to depart.

Soon a tie more sweetly tender
To her gentle spirit clung,
In the bright connubial bower
Where four lovely blossoms hung.
On the fair unfolding petals,
How a mothers precepts shone,
Thence the dew of her example
Still are bright, though she has gone.

But what lips may tell the struggle,
Of her deep maternal love,
When the Angel death appeared
With a message from above,
Who may know the conflict,
When loves strongest tie was riven,
But her faith beamed triumphant
And a victory was given.

Oh, how tranquilly she lingered,
When each earthly hope had fled,
For she knew that she must slumber
With the long forgotten dead.
I was close beside my darling
And there beheld her die,
For I knew that she was going
To dwell with the Angels in the sky.

While a ray of morning sun
O'er a prairie landscape fell,
There were gathered by her bedside
To receive her last farewell,
Her four weeping babes who beheld her,
And her mourning husband as well,
While her spirit was departing
Heard their names pronounced in prayer.

She has gone, but still we see her
In the galaxy on high,
And her bright eye beams upon me
From the overhanging sky.
She has crossed the stormy Jordan
That before me sweeps the tide,
Yet she is very often smiling
And conversing by my side.

Oh my darling how we miss you,
But still are reconciled to God's free will;
Though while the roaring billows
May so darkly hide your face,
We shall cross the chilly waters
And the vale will then be riven,
Then our souls shall meet thee, mother,
We will join you again in Heaven.

OMEGA.

THERE is a promise of an extraordinary foreign immigration to the United States the coming season. Co-operative societies are forming in England for settlement upon the new lands of the United States and Canada, and it is thought the "exodus" from the European States will be greater this year than ever before.

SAVED FROM THE POORHOUSE.

For years David Allingworth suffered from Rheumatism, and notwithstanding the best medical attendance, could not find relief. He came to the Scioto County Poor-house, and had to be carried into and out of bed, on account of his helpless condition. After the failure of all the remedies which had been applied, the Directors of the Poorhouse resolved to use the celebrated German Remedy, ST. JACOB'S OIL, and this was a fortunate resolution; for, with the trial of one bottle, the patient was already much better, and when four bottles had been used upon him, he could again walk about without the use of a cane. The facts as above stated, will be verified by the Editor of the Portsmouth, Ohio, Correspondent.

A GOOD THING.

German Syrup is the special prescription of Dr. A. Boschee, a celebrated German Physician, and is acknowledged to be one of the most fortunate discoveries in medicine. It quickly cures Coughs, Colds and Lung troubles of the severest nature, removing, as it does, the cause of the affection and leaving the parts in a strong and healthy condition. It is not an experimental medicine, but has stood the test of years, giving satisfaction in every case, which its rapidly increasing sale every season confirms. Two million bottles sold annually. Beware of medicines of similar names, lately introduced. Boschee's German Syrup was introduced in the United States in 1868, and is now sold in every town and village in the civilized world. Three doses will relieve any ordinary cough. Price 75 cents. Sample bottle 10 cents.

"I was afflicted with a severe attack of inflammation of the eyes, and could get no relief until I tried BROWN'S ARNICA SALVE. Since then I have used it in my practice, and freely say that I think it is the most wonderful healing Salve ever made and invaluable in every family."
